"But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him, and went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring on oil and wine, and set him on his own donkey, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. The next day when he departed, he took out two silver coins, and gave them to the host, and said to him, 'Take care of him; and whatever you spend more, when I come again, I will repay you". (Luke 10:33-35)

The story of the Good Samaritan is probably one of the mostly commonly known stories of the Bible. It is a story that raises issues of race and tribe, of compassion and more than anything, of commitment. I have gone back to this story again and again as I have been drawn into the conversations, discussions and responses to the incidents of hate in our nation. There seems to be an ever-increasing frequency of such issues around the country. By the way, it's not just happening "somewhere else," it's happening even in our backyard. So, I've been thinking a lot about this parable, but more specifically, this question: "Does the parable of the Good Samaritan have anything to offer to us in how we interpret and react to the issue and incidents of hate in our land today?"

In this story, one man stopped to heal another man who had been beaten and robbed and left on the roadside. We do not know the race of the injured man, only that the Samaritans were of a race that others historically had treated badly. Nonetheless, the Samaritan stopped and not only helped the man but found him a place to rest and was willing to pay for his care until he was healed. I call that more than a gesture, more than a gift of compassion: I see that as willingness to cross boundaries and go beyond one's own comfort to "love your neighbor as yourself" (Luke 12:27).

We as individuals and collectively as a church are always called to consider our own levels of commitment, involvement, and response. We will need to decide if we can participate in projects, programs, and service that might be something akin to this good Samaritan. The message Christ has given us is painfully clear. We are called to love our God "with ALL our hearts with ALL our souls and with ALL our minds and to love ALL our neighbors as ourselves" (Luke 10:27). I look forward to seeing how we find ways to do this together.

Grace and Peace,
Pastor John

INTRODUCTION: WHY THIS STUDY

TO BEGIN, we would like to thank you, the students, congregants, church leaders, elders, pastors, and churches for supporting and using Core Christianity 101. We hope it enriches your Christian life, challenges your heart, and builds up your faith to the glory of God.

This study was designed with several things in mind.

First, we designed this study to advance the gospel.

According to the Pew Research Center, theists, agnostics, Jews, and Mormons score higher in religious knowledge than Protestants, outperforming them on questions about the core teachings and history of Christianity. Almost 60 percent of our youth leave their churches as young adults, with many of them joining the growing numbers of the so-called “nones”: those who profess no adherence to any faith whatsoever.¹

Despite this unsettling news, the core message of Christianity, the gospel, is still capable of renewing the church. Rather than worrying or acting out of fear and self-preservation, we believe that the best hope for Christians, the Church, and the people who feel the pressures to abandon the faith, is the historic Christian faith, the gospel announcement of what God has done through Jesus Christ for the world.

Second, we designed this study to speak to honest questions.

Many in our Evangelical, Baptist, Reformed, Lutheran, and Anglican Churches have honest questions about faith and life that they may even be afraid to ask. Thus, we have sought to shape the material in this study to be of use to the concerns of long-time, committed Christians, new Christians, Christians with wavering faith, and skeptics alike.

We want this study to challenge skeptics and the growing numbers of people leaving the church with answers of substance and beauty, answers that give hope to the hopeless. We want this study to build the faith of Christians who have doubts. We want this study to give new Christians a firm grasp of the Christian faith. And we want to renew the faith of long-time committed Christians and equip them to better share the faith with others.

Third, we designed this study with an eye toward simplicity and a variety of settings.

We have thought of Sunday school classes, Bible study groups, informal gatherings among friends, and even individuals who want to learn more about the Christian faith. Thus, this study is arranged in a series of short lessons, each of which could be done within an hour a week, with questions for personal reflection and group discussion so that Christians can come together to share insights, ask questions, pray for their churches and cities, and find hope to share what they are learning with friends and family.

The best way to do this study is to plan to meet once a week, having read the lesson and answered the questions on your own first. There are two types of questions. Questions for reflection are personal and not something you should feel obligated to share with everyone. Questions for discussion are best discussed in a group where everyone can share their thoughts and questions. After each question, space has been provided for you to answer, but some people prefer to write their answers in a journal or notebook, and that is fine too!

Fourth, we designed this study to engage the drama of Scripture, teach the doctrine of historic Christianity, move to doxology, and enable healthy discipleship.

It was really important to us that we handled doctrine in a way that shows how it naturally arises out of the Bible's narrative of Jesus Christ and his saving work. It was also really important that we showed how this doctrine both inspires our worship and leads to life.

In each lesson, there is a section to read followed by a set of questions for reflection and questions for discussion. We have designed the questions for reflection and discussion with a practical emphasis to force you to engage the material in a prayerful way that should inspire worship and lead to a fuller understanding of how to live as a disciple of Christ. The questions for reflection have personal emphasis, while the discussion questions are oriented toward groups.

For Christians who want to get a good foundation in the basics, this study is a complete, self-contained study on the Christian faith. For Christians who want to go deeper, each lesson compliments a chapter of Michael Horton's book Core Christianity: Finding yourself in God's Story.

Before you begin the first lesson, watch this video where Michael Horton gives an overview of what you can expect in this study: <https://vimeo.com/167180988/c5d5c1bd96>

Adopt a Counselor

Individuals, churches or families can bless the ministry of Pine Springs Camp this summer by agreeing to be an encourager to a counselor, program or other summer staff person. Sponsors will agree to:

Encourage a Summer Staff Details

We ask that each congregation agrees to:

1. Pray for the staff member that they are assigned. A weekly reminder during worship to pray for the summer ministry as well is appreciated.
2. Send an encouragement note between May 30th– June 8th, letting them know that you are praying for and encouraging them this summer. Be sure to include the return address and contact person, so the staff person can send a thank you note.
3. Send them a shoe box sized package filled with the following by July 13th:

- Cards and notes
- Candy Bars, candy and other fun items that would fit in the box (please send just enough for them to enjoy and not be wasteful!)
- A $25.00 Gas gift card- (Giant Eagle Get-Go is recommended but another type is fine)
- A $25.00 Gift Card for a Restaurant (the chains that are near are Ruby Tuesdays, Eat and Park, Sub-way, Applebee's, Chili's,)
- Small devotional, book and or other spiritual encouragement items that fit in the box

Your congregation can send other note cards as well until the end of the summer August 5th, 2018. By sending the above items in the suggested manner will help maintain consistency and allow our staff to enjoy some special times together. It also will be less wasteful! Please refrain from sending items with peanuts and or peanut oil if possible.
